Silverstrem tenui musam meditaris avena:* Vergil

JOURNAL OF SOUTH ASIAN LITERATURE

Two-Volume Issue : Volume XXXIII, Nos. 1 & 2 (1998)
Volume XXXIV, Nos. 1 & 2 (1999)

MISCELLANY / AHMED ALI ISSUE

CONTENTS

VARIS SHAH'S HIR : AN INTRODUCTION & SELECTED VERSES Surjit Singh Dulai 1

RENUNCIATION Saradindu Bandyopadhyay 25

THE NARRATOR-IN-EXILE'S UNIMAGINABLE PALIMPSEST: SALMAN RUSHDIE'S THE MOOR'S LAST SIGH Mariam Pirbhai 28

MERWAR PLATES Jean Arasanayagam 50

THE COMPANION Volga 74

LETTERING (IN) NIGHTMARES : THE POETRY OF AJANTA D. Venkat Rao 87

AHMED ALI SECTION

AHMED ALI (1910-1994) Carlo Coppola 112

INTERVIEW AHMED ALI 117

STORIES BY AHMED ALI:

A NIGHT OF WINTER RAINS 195

CLOUDS DON'T COME 200

SHAKUNTALA 205
IN THE TRAIN 210
OUR LANE 218
MY ROOM 231
ESSAY: ART, POLITICS, AND LIFE 239
CRITICAL ESSAYS :
A NOVEL BY AHMED ALI Muhammed Hasan Askari . . 243
AHMED ALI AND THE TRANSITION TO A POST-COLONIAL MODE IN THE PAKISTANI NOVEL IN ENGLISH
Alamgir Hashmi 255

These issues, dated 1998 and 1999, were published in 2000.

IMPORTANT NOTICE, JSAL SUBSCRIBERS

THESE issues of JSAL constitute the penultimate volumes of the journal. After the appearance of Volume 35, to appear later this year (2000), JSAL will cease publication. Founded in 1963 at the University of Chicago as Mahfil, A Quarterly of South Asian Literature--a vehicle for the dissemination of classical and modern South Asian literature--the journal has published during the past thirty-seven years over 3,000 creative works, scholarly articles, book reviews, critical notices, bibliographies, and interviews. In 1972 the journal was moved to Michigan State University, where it was renamed. The editors wish to acknowledge with deepest gratitude the interest, support, and encouragement of all contributors, subscribers, and readers. It is hoped that some ambitious, young scholar(s) of South Asian literature will step up and continue the tradition begun by JSAL and will establish in the new millennium a new and better journal.

Our sincerest thanks to all!